THINGS TO KNOW

JOE PANTORNO, SPORTS EDITOR

In an age of hot takes and clickbait, ESPN ran a report last year stating that turmoil and dysfunction were going to put an end to the Patriots' nearly two-decade dynasty. Sure, this year hasn't been an overwhelming success compared to regular seasons of the past, but here the Patriots are, preparing for yet another postseason game where one win will get them into the AFC Championship Game. To hear what Metro columnist Danny Picard has to say on ESPN's hot take last year, head inside.

WELCOME TO
METRO BOSTONCOLE BOMBING PLANNER
KILLED IN YEMEN STRIKE

Jamal al-Badawi, wanted by the United States for his suspected role in the attack on the USS Cole 18 years ago, was killed in a precision strike in Yemen on Jan. 1, U.S. Central Command said on Sunday. Badawi was indicted by a federal grand jury in 2003 over his role in the October 2000 deadly bombing of the USS Cole, a Navy guided-missile destroyer. He escaped from prison in Yemen twice, once in 2003 and again in 2006. "U.S. forces confirmed the results of the strike following a deliberate assessment process," said Central Command spokesman Captain Bill Urban, two days after the Defense Department said U.S. forces had targeted Badawi in the strike. It is the latest blow to Yemen's al Qaeda branch, known as Al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula (AQAP), which has lost key leaders in U.S. strikes in recent years. In 2018, U.S. officials said they believed that Ibrahim Hassan al-Asiri, once one of the world's most feared bombmakers, had been killed. Still, Katherine Zimmerman at the American Enterprise Institute conservative think tank cautioned that AQAP had proven it will remain a threat.

SOCCER'S ROONEY BUSTED
FOR PUBLIC INTOXICATION

2 English football star Wayne Rooney was arrested in December at Dulles Airport outside Washington, D.C., for public intoxication, according to local police. Rooney, who has played for U.S. soccer team D.C. United since last year, was booked into the Loudoun County Adult Detention Center on Dec. 16 on a charge of public intoxication stemming from an arrest by the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority Police, the local sheriff's office said. The English footballer was arrested at an international arrivals gate at Dulles after he triggered a door alarm but did not breach airport security, a Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority spokesman said in a statement. He received a $25 fine, according to court documents. Rooney, 33, was released later the same day on a personal recognizance bond, said Craig Troxell, a spokesman for the Loudoun County Sheriff's Office. It was not immediately clear why authorities had delayed releasing details of Rooney's arrest for more than two weeks. Rooney's agent could not be reached immediately for comment.

POLAND TO CLOSE 'UNSAFE'
'ESCAPE ROOMS': PM

4 Poland will close "escape rooms" that do not meet safety standards, Prime Minister Mateusz Morawiecki said on Sunday after a fire killed five teenage girls. The girls were celebrating a birthday at an escape room in the northern town of Koszalin when the fire broke out. The venue's owner was arrested on Sunday, Polish media reported. Authorities carried out inspections of at least 178 escape room locations across Poland at the weekend and found 129 did not meet health and safety standards, said the head of state fire services Leszek Suski. Thirteen locations were ordered closed. In escape rooms, participants are locked in and race against the clock to solve puzzles and challenges to open a way out. "This was unprecedented ... any sort of prevention is important," Morawiecki told reporters. Interior Minister Joachim Brudziński urged parents to report potential safety violations at escape rooms or other children's entertainment centers. "Sanctions need to be harsh," Brudziński said.

WIKILEAKS: 140 THINGS NOT TO SAY ABOUT ASSANGE

5 WikiLeaks on Sunday advised journalists not to report 140 different "false and defamatory" statements about its founder Julian Assange, who has been holed up in the Ecuadorian embassy in London since June 2012. It was not immediately clear what prompted the advice to media organizations, but WikiLeaks singled out Britain's Guardian newspaper for publishing what it said was a false report about Assange. The Guardian did not immediately respond late on Sunday to a Reuters request for comment. The Australian set up WikiLeaks as a channel for publishing confidential information from anonymous sources. He is a hero to some for exposing what supporters cast as government abuse of power and for championing free speech, but to others he is a rebel who has undermined the security of the United States. WikiLeaks angered Washington by publishing hundreds of thousands of secret U.S. diplomatic cables that laid bare often highly critical U.S. appraisals of world leaders from Russian President Vladimir Putin to members of the Saudi royal family.

Kevin Spacey due in court Monday

The disgraced Oscar winner is accused of groping an 18-year-old in 2016.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

"House of Cards" star Kevin Spacey is due in court in Nantucket on Monday, where he is expected to plead not guilty to sexual assault charges for allegedly groping an 18-year-old busboy at a bar in July 2016.

Nantucket District Court Clerk Magistrate Brian Kearney issued a criminal complaint of indecent assault and battery against Kevin S. Fowler, also known as Kevin Spacey, on Dec. 20, 2018.

In a criminal complaint filed, the victim told police Spacey allegedly bought him drinks after he got off work at Club Car bar, and Spacey asked the teen about his penis size. Spacey then tried to get him to come back to his house for an after-party, before reaching through his pants and touching the teen.

The busboy reportedly filmed a short part of the alleged groping on Snap-

"Of course some believed everything and have just been waiting with bated breath to hear me confess it all."

Kevin Spacey, on Twitter, as his character from "House of Cards" chat and sent the video to his girlfriend.

Investigators showed the busboy the video during their interview and confirmed his and Spacey's clothes that night. Spacey eventually got up to go to the bathroom and the 18-year-old went home, according to the complaint.

Spacey responded with a bizarre video posted on his Twitter account in which he appeared as his character Frank Underwood from "House of Cards" in a kitchen sporting a Christmas apron.

"Of course some believed everything and have just been waiting with bated breath to hear me confess it all," he said in character.

"They're just dying to have me declare that everything said is true and that I got what I deserved. Wouldn't that be easy if it was all so simple? Only you and I both know it's not that simple, not in politics and not in life. But you wouldn't believe the worst without evidence, would you? You wouldn't rush to judgment without facts, would you? Did you?" he said in the video.

Spacey's career fell apart in November 2017 following a slew of sexual assault and harassment allegations.

Actor Anthony Rapp accused Spacey of making a sexual advance toward him in 1986, when he was 14 years old and Spacey was 26.

Then, Netflix killed off his character and fired Spacey in the wake of multiple sexual harassment claims from former and current "House of Cards" production staff.

2020 Presidential contenders begin to step forward

The latest potential challengers to President Trump.

letters@metro.us

"ramp up to ramp down."

Flirting heavily

On MSNBC Friday, former Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe said his chances of running were "50-50," then delivered the equivalent of a stump speech about his successes at the state helm, including health care and wage growth.

In December, former NYC Mayor Michael Bloomberg made some conspicuous preliminary moves, meeting with prominent Democratic leaders in Iowa — site of the first Democratic caucus vote in January 2020 — and telling Radio Iowa that he was ready to sell his company, Bloomberg LP, or place it in a blind trust ahead of a return to politics.

Polling leaders

A surprise MoveOn poll last month found that Beto O'Rourke — who narrowly lost his Senate race to Ted Cruz in ruby-red Texas, while raising record amounts of cash and gaining national celebrity — was the candidate Democrats were most excited about.

Since then, other early polls have coalesced around three contenders: Biden, 2016 candidate Bernie Sanders, and O'Rourke, in that order. In mid-December, a straw poll of likely Iowa Democratic caucusgoers placed Biden first at 32 percent, Sanders second at 19 percent and O'Rourke third at 11 percent.

Following was Warren, with 9 percent; California Sen. Kamala Harris (5 percent) and New Jersey Sen. Cory Booker (4 percent). Bloomberg was at 3 percent.

Sanders has run into some early headwinds: Recent news cycles have included reports about sexism in his 2016 campaign and "Bernie bros" attacking O'Rourke on social media; some Democrats blame Sanders supporters' ire for hobbling Hillary Clinton in her race against Trump.

The winners of the mid-term congressional elections have barely warmed their seats, but potential 2020 presidential candidates are wasting no time in declaring their intentions to join what political analysts have called a "free-for-all" and "candidate tsunami."

One prominent Democrat, Sen. Elizabeth Warren of Massachusetts, announced her plans to form an exploratory committee for a presidential run last week, joining several others. A number of other prominent names are expected to announce within the next two weeks. Overall, more than a dozen candidates — perhaps as many as 30 — are expected to seek traction in the early stages of the race.

NPR reports that in addition to Warren, three other Democrats have at least formed exploratory committees for a presidential run: ex-Rep. John Delaney of Maryland, who announced he was running in 2017; entrepreneur Andrew Yang; and Richard Ojeda, who lost his mid-term race for a West Virginia congressional seat.

Expected to announce

Former San Antonio Mayor Julián Castro, who has attracted presidential speculation ever since a star-making speech at the Democratic National Convention in 2008, will formally announce his run on Jan. 12, multiple sources reported last week. He formed an exploratory committee on Dec. 12.

Last month, former Vice President Joe Biden called himself the "most qualified person in the country to be president" during a speech in Montana. It was the clearest statement yet that he is considering a run. Shortly after the remarks, Antjuan Seawright, a Democratic strategist who worked for Hillary Clinton's 2016 campaign, called Biden's strategy

Trump holds firm on border wall, offers steel option as compromise

President Donald Trump on Sunday pledged not to bend in his demand for a wall along the southern border with Mexico but said the barrier could be made of steel instead of concrete as a potential compromise with Democrats who refuse to fund the project.

Trump's comments came at the start of the third week of a partial government shutdown that has left hundreds of thousands of federal workers idled or without paychecks.

Trump, a former New York businessman, said he could relate to the workers who would have trouble paying bills because of the shutdown and threatened, again, to declare a national emergency as an alternative way to build the wall, depending on the outcome of talks in the coming days.

Democrats, led by new Speaker of the House of Representatives Nancy Pelosi, consider the wall to be immoral and have declined to approve the $5.6 billion Trump wants to make good on the signature promise of his 2016 presidential campaign. Democrats, who took control of the House last week, passed a bill to reopen the government without wall funding.

The debate was a "very important battle to win from the standpoint of safety, No. 1, (and) defining our country and who we are," Trump told reporters at the White House before leaving for a short trip to the Camp David presidential retreat.

"The barrier, or the wall, can be of steel instead of concrete, if that helps people. It may be better," he said.

Vice President Mike Pence led a second round of talks with congressional aides on Sunday about the issue, but Trump had said he did not expect those talks to produce results.

The White House warned again that the shutdown could last for some time while suggesting that the offer of a steel barrier was an olive branch to Democrats.

Mick Mulvaney, Trump's acting chief of staff, told NBC's "Meet the Press" program that agreeing to a steel separation would allow Democrats to stick to their refusal to fund a wall.

"That should help us move in the right direction," said Mulvaney, who is also the head of the Office of Management and Budget.

Democrats would likely demand other concessions, like protections for immigrants brought to the United States as children, otherwise known as Dreamers, or changes to other spending provisions.

House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer did not show his hand when asked whether the White House offer to take a concrete wall off the table was evidence of compromise.

"It'll be discussed," he said on NBC.

Mulvaney, who took part in talks with Pence and congressional aides on Saturday, said technical requests bogged them down.

"I think this is going to drag on a lot longer. I think that's by intention," he said.

About 800,000 government workers are either furloughed or working without pay.

Large chunks of the federal government were shut down on Dec. 22 after lawmakers and the president hit an impasse over Trump's demands to build a wall. About 800,000 government workers are either furloughed or working without pay.

Trump is demanding that any funding to keep the federal government operational also include money to help build a $23 billion wall along the U.S. border with Mexico.

Trump said on Sunday that he should not have to lower his demand for $5.6 billion, though he said he understood the impact the impasse was having on affected federal workers struggling to pay their bills. REUTERS

LIFESTYLE

Your guide to all the must-see TV.

ANDREW HUSBAND
drew.husband@metro.us

Now that the holidays are over, the winter TV season is in full swing. Here's what to watch on TV this week.

'Project Blue Book,' Jan. 8 at 10 p.m. on History
A modern take on "The X-Files," including the recent revival, most likely wouldn't work for a variety of reasons, but chiefly because of the availability of smartphones. With "Project Blue Book," History bypasses problems of technology by transporting audiences back to the 1950s, where curiosity about flying saucers and little green men from outer space all began. Starring "Game of Thrones" alum Aidan Gillen as a college professor recruited by the Air Force to head its clandestine investigations, "Project Blue Book" should be a new sci-fi favorite.

'The Goldbergs,' Jan. 9 at 8 p.m. on ABC Adam F. Goldberg's hugely popular family comedy returns from a mid-season hiatus with "The Wedding Singer," a crossover episode set in the same universe as executive producer Adam Sandler's iconic movie of the same name. The creator and showrunner confirmed the show and the film existed in the same universe, and even shared a brief preview of the episode's wedding scenes to prove it.

'I'm Sorry,' Jan. 9 at 10

p.m. on truTV
Created by "Veep" and "Step Brothers" star Andrea Savage, "I'm Sorry" is billed as a "Curb Your Enthusiasm"-like comedy thanks to its largely unscripted format. Like Larry David, Savage stars as the main character, Andrea, a writer, wife and mother whose immaturity and numerous neuroses make up the bulk of the program's content.

Josh Hutcherson is back for "Future Man" season 2. HULU saved it from cancellation at Fox. Regular Chelsea Peretti will no longer be as involved in the show, unfortunately, but that doesn't mean Andy Samberg and the rest of the gang are leaving, too. In fact, the rest of the crew will return this week when season 6 premieres on Thursday.

'Sex Education,' Jan. 11 on Netflix
What's more awkward than being a teenager? Being a teenager whose mother, played by Gillian Anderson, is a professional sex therapist with absolutely no filter when it comes to societal norms and topics of conversation. This is the situation Otis Milburn (Asa Butterfield), whose father is also a sex therapist, finds himself in in Netflix's new coming-of-age series.

'Future Man,' Jan. 11 on Hulu
The second season of Hulu's time-bending action comedy series "Future Man" is set to begin streaming Friday. Starring Josh Hutcherson, Eliza Coupe, Derek Wilson, Haley Joel Osment, Seth Rogen and others, the latest season sees season 1's attempts to right the broken timeline come apart.

'You're the Worst,' Jan. 9 at 10 p.m. on FXX
It's the beginning of the end for creator Stephen Falk's critically acclaimed comedy "You're the Worst." Season 5 will also be its last, and it will feature Gretchen (Aya Cash) and Jimmy's (Chris Geere) last-ditch effort to seal the deal on their tumultuously beautiful relationship. If you want to find out whether the pair is actually going to go along with their marriage plans, however, you'll have to tune in and see.

'Brooklyn Nine-Nine,' Jan. 10 at 9 p.m. on NBC
Fans of Dan Goo's comic take on the police procedural, "Brooklyn Nine-Nine," have been rejoicing ever since NBC

Chelsea Roy talks "Bachelor" editing, Colton Underwood and how she found love.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

You may remember Chelsea Roy on season 22 of "The Bachelor" as the show's proclaimed villain, or maybe you watched the 30-year-old single mom on the popular spin-off "Bachelor in Paradise."

But what you haven't seen is the softer side of Roy, the one truly looking for love. With the new "Bachelor" season premiering Monday, Roy talked to Metro about what she thinks of new "Bachelor" Colton Underwood, her life after the show and how editing can change perception.

What are your thoughts on the new Bachelor this season, Colton Underwood?

I personally met him in "Paradise." We had a little bit of the Tia and Colton drama and wondered whether or not they were going to continue their relationship. Both of them seemed extremely able and ready but things did not work out and I saw him get very emotional about it. He became very aware that he is sensitive and he really is looking for love, so my feelings are good for him!

Roy was on season 22.

What advice would you give the women on this or any future season of the show?

This is my No. 1 piece of advice: You always have to think of life after the show. If you are really making a strong bond in a not-normal situation, say in Paris or Bali, you need to be honest and be true to that situation and really think of life outside of the show. Because you go back to your normal work and normal living quarters and it's not so glamorous. So you have to be honest about it.

You've recently found love. How is your new relationship? Are you happy you found your new beau outside of the show?

I am! People always say you know it when you know it, and that was true for me. I had just gotten done "Bachelor in Paradise" and I was actually seeing someone from the show and it wasn't working out. I wasn't ready to commit to anything at that time. I only have about 50 percent of my life available because of the time I spend with Sammy, my son — it's a small window of opportunity. I started working in the city of Boston and I became partners with a new influencer app called hoo.be and the person that I am with actually worked for this application, and by default we started working together. I think I was naive in the beginning or had my wall up and it just organically happened over time. I think I was finally ready to admit to it this past month and I'm really really happy. He's an unexpected love, I guess, so it's been amazing.

You've already been on "Bachelor in Paradise." Are there any more spin-offs in your future?

No, I think I'm done. I gave it a solid year. I'm 30 and I also have a child, I can't see myself taking any more time away. Also, the "Bachelor" franchise I don't necessarily believe carries out what I once thought it did. For me, it was all about love and I never watched the show prior to going on. I soon found out after my season with Ari and "Bachelor in Paradise" that editing can really destroy someone's reputation for a small period of time.

Meet the new 'Bachelor'

Everything you need to know about season 23 of the hit reality series.

ANDREW HUSBAND
drew.husband@metro.us

Five whole months after the three-hour conclusion to "The Bachelorette" season 14, "The Bachelor" season 23 is set to premiere Monday night on ABC.

Colton Underwood, a contestant on the previous "Bachelorette" season, was named as the successor to "Bachelor" season 22 star Arie Luyendyk Jr. back in September. Now that the latest iteration of the reality television franchise is set to begin, here's everything you should know about the new season, its star and the cast of lovely ladies competing for his affection.

Who is the star of season 23?

Before becoming a reality television sensation, Underwood played college football at Illinois State and professional football for the San Diego Chargers. He was an undrafted free agent in the NFL but ultimately decided to retire. Soon after, he piqued ABC and its viewers' interests with back-to-back appearances on "The Bachelorette" and season 5 of "Bachelor in Paradise," the franchise's late summer entry.

"I'm so grateful. I can't tell you how much I've been smiling," Underwood told People of becoming the new "Bachelor" back in September.

"Third time's the charm, hopefully," he told "Good Morning America."

Colton Underwood

"It took appearing on the two shows to finally reveal what I want in a life partner."

Who's in the cast?

Of course, Underwood

"The Bachelor" is back. CRAIG SJODIN/ABC

isn't the only "star" of the latest season. There's also the 30 new women who the show's producers and casting agents have spent the past few months selecting for the show. They include Hannah Brown, who won the Miss Alabama title in 2018, Alex Blumberg, a dog rescuer from Vancouver, Miss North Carolina 2018 winner Caelynn Miller-Keyes and dozens of other single women vying for Underwood's attention.

The rest of the cast features many ladies from Texas and California, like Brianna "Bri" Barnes, Demi Burnett, Erika McNutt, Heather Martin, Adrienne "Jane" Aver, Kirpa Sudick, Laura Pellerito, Onyeka Ehie, Revian Chang and Tracy. They also feature contestants from Florida, New York, Colorado and other American states and Canadian territories.

As big and diverse as the season 23 cast is, however, no accounting can be completed without mentioning the recent video of Bri Barnes. The Los Angeles-based model will apparently be faking an Australian accent in order to stand out. "I'm not really Australian," she says in the clip, "but you have to do what you can to stand out." So yeah, this is going to be fun.

"The Bachelor" returns tonight at 8 p.m. on ABC.

After an ESPN column stated last year that the Patriots dynasty was on the verge of ending, here they are preparing for another Super Bowl run. GETTY IMAGES

WHERE IS ESPN'S UPDATE ON THE PATRIOTS' DEMISE?

PICARD
@DannyPicard

Remember when the New England Patriots were all but finished?

There was "a palpable sense in the building" last season that the 2017 Patriots season would be the final installment of the dynasty, according to a wild report by ESPN's Seth Wickersham that was released a day before last year's Wild Card Round of the NFL playoffs. The 13-3 Patriots were taking advantage of their first-round bye as the No. 1 seed in the AFC but were suddenly in the spotlight for reported internal turmoil more so than for their on-field success.

Though, maybe "suddenly" is too strong a word. After all, there had been plenty of drama surrounding the Patriots after the Jimmy Garoppolo trade, and then after Bill Belichick banned Tom Brady's personal trainer, Alex Guerrero, from the sidelines and the team plane. Before Wickersham's report, we all pretty much knew that it might not have been one big happy family in Foxboro.

But Wickersham's piece gave those organizational disagreements a toxic feel. It attempted to validate the idea that last season would be the end of the Patriots' "Big Three": Robert Kraft, Brady and Belichick.

One month after that ESPN report, the Patriots were playing in their second straight Super Bowl — their third Super Bowl in four years. Fast-forward to one year after the report, just days before this year's NFL playoffs begin, and the Patriots are in a similar position. They have a first-round bye and will host a Divisional Round playoff game at Gillette Stadium in mid-January.

To that, I wonder, where is Wickersham's update?

Surely all those "New England staffers, executives, players and league sources with knowledge of the team's inner workings" that Wickersham said he interviewed for his report, they must have something to say about what's changed and why last year wasn't the demise of the Patriots dynasty, no?

Okay, so the 2018 Patriots didn't have a perfect year. They began the season with Julian Edelman serving a four-game PED suspension, dealt with some offensive struggles after losing several key pieces in the offseason, and then lost Josh Gordon to a possible career-ending suspension. They finished 11-5 as the No. 2 seed in the AFC, and while that's not as good a record as many projected, things could be a whole lot worse for this Patriots team that was supposed to be all but finished after last season.

The reality is Wickersham exaggerated the reasonable conflict that he was told about by his sources. I'm not knocking his sources or saying he made stuff up, but it's clear that his report before last year's playoffs was more than just a hard news piece. There was plenty of opinion and assumption built in, so much so that some of those opinions and assumptions were ultimately portrayed as facts.

But more than anything, it was an exaggeration of the facts.

If it were strictly a hard news piece, then the headline to Wickersham's story would've been, "Garoppolo repeatedly rejected a four-year, $72 million contract extension." Talk about burying the lead. That was some hard news right there. And it confirmed that both Belichick and Kraft wanted to keep Garoppolo around.

But Wickersham even added his own commentary to that, saying "Garoppolo and [agent Don] Yee rejected the offers out of hand, for reasons that remain unclear."

I mean, if you have any common sense, those reasons wouldn't be unclear at all. Garoppolo and Brady have the same agent. Brady was about to be named NFL MVP. And Garoppolo — who finally wanted to be a starting quarterback — was an impending free agent.

Yet, one year ago, common sense was nonexistent in Wickersham's report, and a glimpse into the reality of a dynasty trying to manage some very unique situations turned into a clickbait hit piece from the Worldwide Leader.

Pretty powerful stuff, if you ask me. But what's even more powerful is the way the Patriots have since gone to another Super Bowl and are now one win away from advancing to their eighth consecutive AFC Championship Game.

I'm just wondering if ESPN has any update on how the heck that could be possible.

Aries Channel your energy wisely and avoid getting into an argument. Volunteer to help someone who has aided you in the past. Be smart with your money and invest in your future.

Taurus Look for an outlet that will take your mind off annoying situations. Don't share personal secrets. Concentrate on physical improvements that will build your confidence.

Gemini Look at the possibilities and learn all you can to ensure that you have everything you need to make positive changes in your life. Aim high.

Cancer Don't let an outsider meddle in your personal affairs. If you must socialize with colleagues or peers, be a good listener. Build relationships and gain allies.

Leo Don't leave your responsibilities for someone else. You'll be disappointed in the results, and it will make you look bad in the eyes of superiors.

Virgo Stick to what and who you know. Don't let anyone limit your dreams or interfere in your plans to get ahead. Use your charm, experience and knowledge to wow someone.

Libra Get along with everyone, regardless of what others do or say. It's in your best interest to stay calm and avoid controversy. If you make special plans with a loved one, your day will improve.

Scorpio You can take a unique approach to life, as long as you aren't extravagant or unreasonable. Discussions will get heated if you share too much information.

Sagittarius Take care of domestic matters. Make changes at home that will add to your convenience and comfort. Physical fitness will help alleviate anxiety. Romance is encouraged.

Capricorn You'll feel the need to make adjustments. Start within and work your way out. Purge what is no longer important to you. Free your life of unnecessary clutter.

Aquarius Personal improvements will pay off, but don't be too quick to overspend on a product that promises the impossible. Put your money into fitness, a proper diet or a trendy new look.

Pisces If you connect with someone who has helped you or collaborated with you in the past, good things will transpire. Walk away from indulgent people trying to tempt you to excess. EUGENIA LAST
